Importing Your Brushes into Procreate
Option 1 - Bulk Importing

Unfortunately, Procreate does not yet have the capability to import multiple brush files at once. There is a workaround option available using Airdrop. Ian Barnard put together a handy video giving the steps on how to do this. Click here to watch on YouTube.

Helpful Tip:

With over 100 brushes included in this pack, I recommend separating them into different 'Sets' as per the folders in your download ie. Motifs, Shapes, Shape Outlines, Borders, Textures

Importing Your Brushes into Procreate
Option 2 - Dropbox / iCloud

If the previous option did not work for you, here are instructions on importing your brushes via your Dropbox or iCloud. I would recommend you use iCloud if you can. Procreate defaults to the iCloud directory for importing, so it will save you some navigating time.

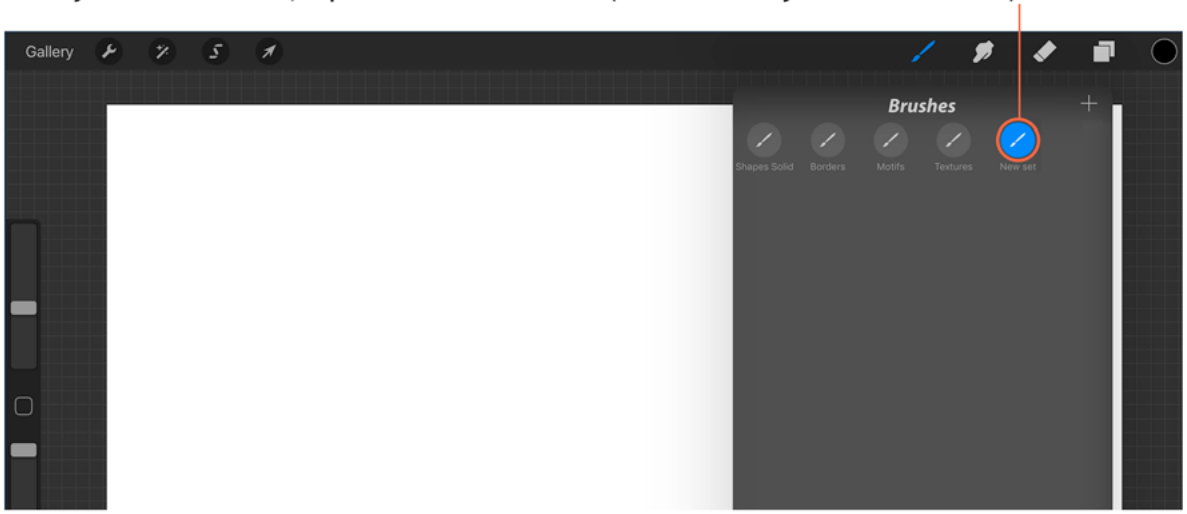
In the download files you will see a folder called 'Ornament-Brushes' which contains all your brush files (separated into their own category folders). Put the whole folder in a location you can access from your iPad (such as Dropbox or iCloud).

Please Note: With over 100 brushes included in this pack, I recommend separating them into different 'Sets' in the same way they are arranged in your download - ie. Motifs, Shapes, Shape Outlines, Borders, Textures. This will help you find what you need easily.

Open Procreate, create a new document and follow the steps below.

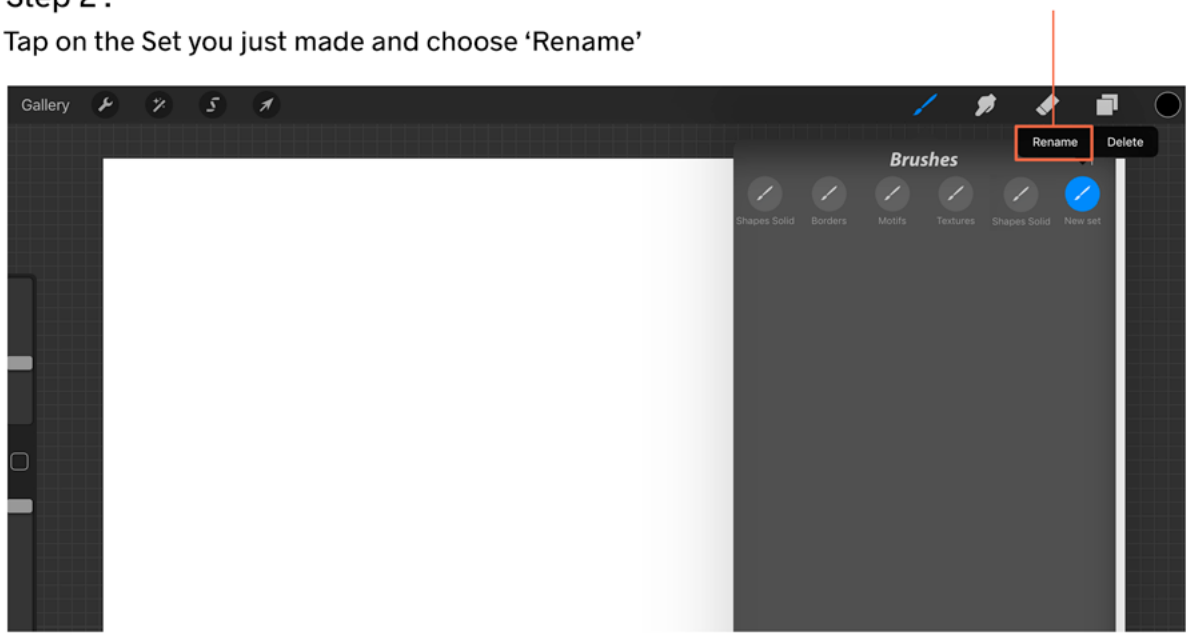
Step 1 :

From your Brush Panel, tap the 'New Set' action (at the end of your brush set list)



Step 2 :

Tap on the Set you just made and choose ‘Rename’



Step 3 :

Name it something relevant, like ‘Borders’ for your Border Brushes

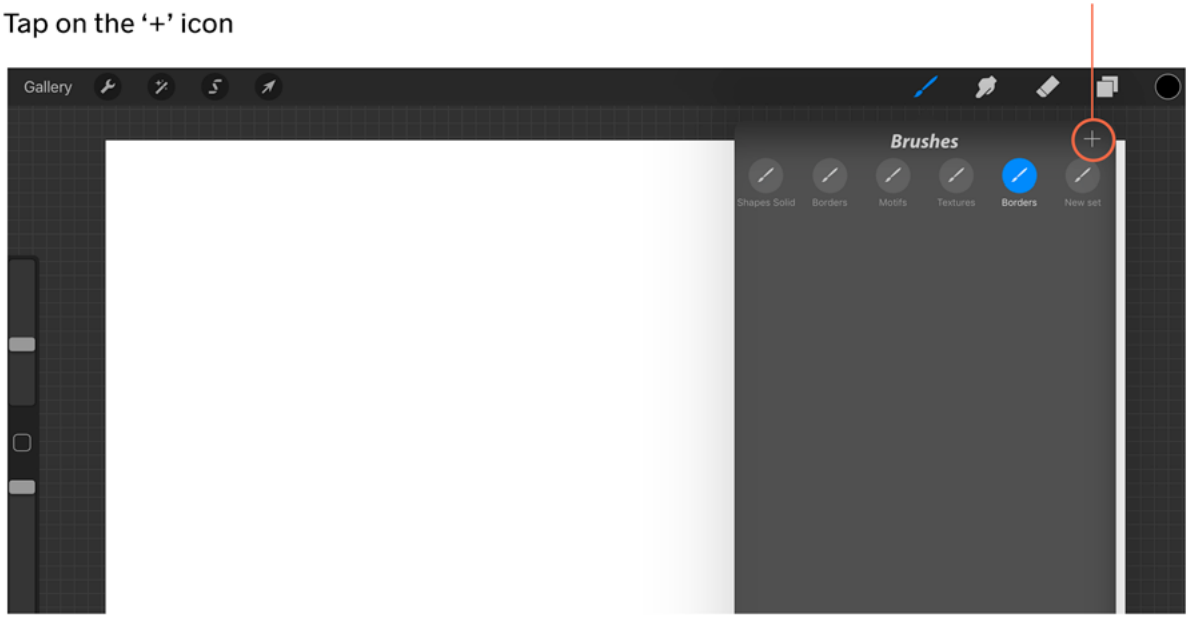
Step 4 :

Tap on the '+' icon



Step 5 :

Choose 'Import from' on this screen

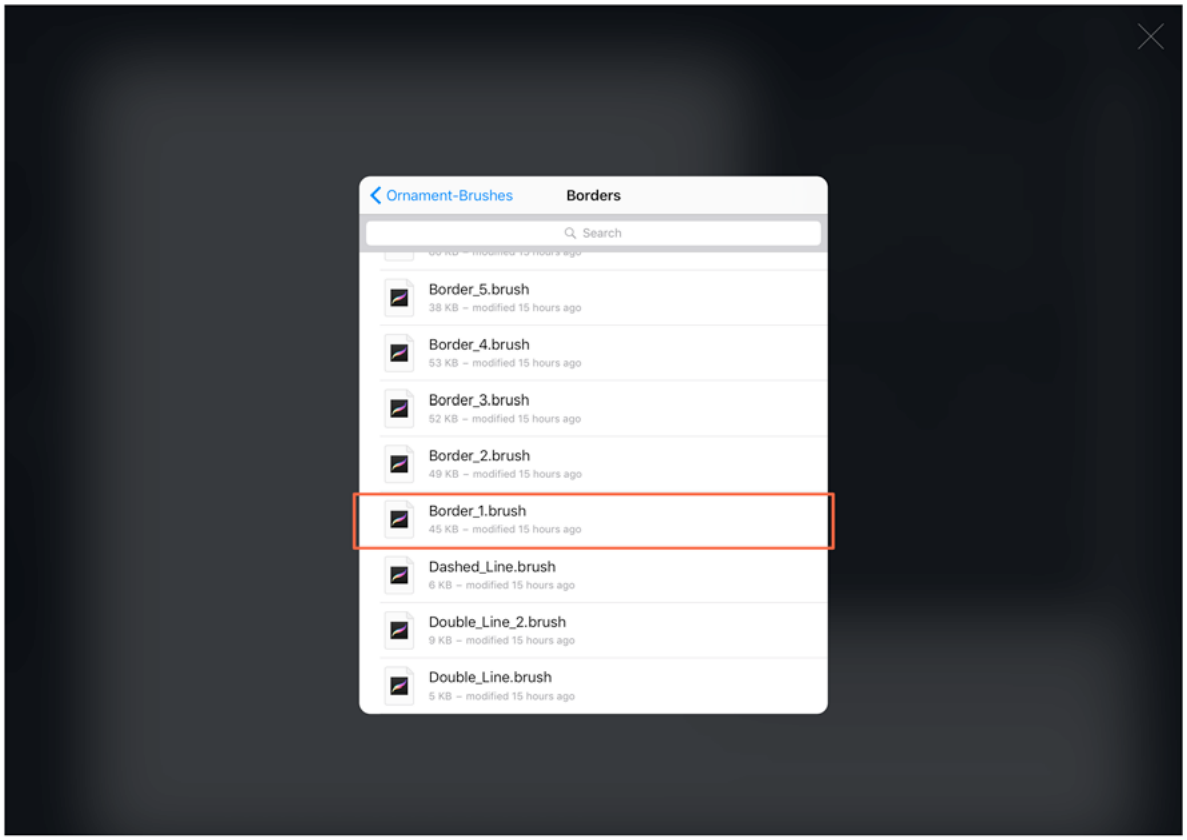
Step 6 :

Navigate to the location you saved your brushes and tap a brush file



Repeat from Step 4 to import all of your Border Brushes. Next create a new set to import the next set of brushes.
